HOW TO USE THIS

Your Homeschool Attendance Record

This is a simple, no-fuss way to record the days you have taught and what you covered. Tick the day, note the subjects, and the monthly summary keeps your running total in one place — so at review time you are reading a record rather than reconstructing one from memory.

Print a fresh monthly grid each month, or load the PDF into a tablet app like GoodNotes or Notability and fill it in with a stylus. Either way, the habit that matters is filling it in the same day rather than catching up at the end of term.

Please check what your own area actually requires. Homeschool record-keeping rules differ by country and, in the US, by state — some ask for a set number of days or hours, some ask for nothing at all. This planner is a place to keep your records, not advice on what those records must contain.

- ☐ Print the monthly grid (US Letter or A4)
- ☐ Tick each day you teach, as you go
- ☐ Note the subjects covered that day
- ☐ Carry the monthly total to the year summary
- ☐ Check your own local requirements

More Free Homeschool Printables

If this was useful, there are more free printables — no email required — at gabeocreative.com/free-printables.

For families who want the whole year in one place, the Homeschool OS keeps attendance, lesson planning, a gradebook and a reading log on one Google Sheets dashboard, so the attendance record becomes a by-product of planning you were doing anyway.
